

Megan's Story

Megan Hall from Highett, a mother of two and a Year 12 teacher, believes in the Brainastics way of teaching children to read and write, having seen her son Josh, 5, go from 'having no real interest in reading and writing to doing really well.'

Megan did a lot of research into the best options for a pre-school reading and writing course for Josh and found the Brainastics team were the only one of its kind, teaching Jolly Phonics to pre-schoolers.

"Literacy for my children is very important to me, but I didn't want them to feel too much pressure. Brainastics offered both an effective way for them to learn to read and write and a fun environment - they love it, it is such a fun class," said Megan.

"They learn to read and write well and also learn important things like how to hold a pen properly. This is all great stuff to prepare them for when they arrive at school. Also, Jen and Shae are very positive teachers who run great classrooms and so kids enjoy going there," she continued.

Josh is now at school and is doing really well, bringing home his readers and enjoys the challenge with learning his 100 most common used words.

"He shows a lot more interest in reading and he attempts to write in lower case even though lots of his peers are still writing in capitals," continued Megan.

Josh did well and had so much fun at Brainastics that Megan decided to enrol her younger daughter, Ruby, who is four years old.

"Although Ruby doesn't really need extra tuition, we do it because she loves it. She has picked up a lot of things through Josh and so is picking it up faster than him and doing brilliantly," said Megan.
